Occasionally we are asked "what is the Anti-Racism Affinity Group of Greater Newburyport?" and "can I join?" We are a small group that has been meeting since May, 2017 to support, discuss, and learn about systemic racism and intersectional issues generally, as well as mentor others beginning their journeys of anti-racism.

We support and challenge one another in our own education through books, movies, articles, podcasts, workshops, etc., and look at ways to share these ideas and information with the community, with individuals, and with others who wish to begin their own learning pods.

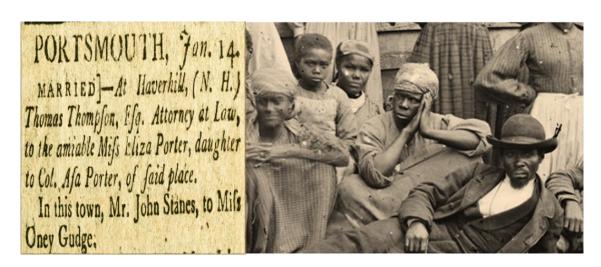

We stand in solidarity with all those working to end racism, inequality, war and imperialism, while also supporting efforts to build power in working class communities of color. Collective and individual liberation for all!

Screening of We Are the Warriors

Sunday, October 29 at 3:00 pm at the Portland Museum of Art

with filmmakers David Camlin and Megan Grumbling

Tourmaline Prize for Best Feature Made in Maine, 2023 Maine International Film Festival

For nearly sixty years, students and alumni of Wells High School in Maine have called themselves the "Warriors.― Their yearbook is named for the Abenaki, the Indigenous people the town's settlers first encountered in the 1600s. The school's mascot, variations of a stoic Native American head in profile with braids and feathered headband, has drawn both support and criticism in the past. However, during the 2017 fall athletic season, an incident shocks the town and reignites the debate.

We Are The Warriors follows the citizenry of Wells, a population that includes Indigenous Peoples, as they convene to speak, hear each other, and seek consensus. And by inviting Wabanaki voices from across the state to join the conversation, including the mother whose experience ignited the debate, the residents of Wells work to better understand the lasting effects of their colonial past and how it relates to the present day impact of their good intentions.

View the trailer and learn more about the screening on the PMA's website.

White People Challenging Racism: Moving from Talk to Action - Part 1 Online

While this five-session workshop welcomes participants of all identities, its focus is on racism as a system that White people created, maintain and condone - and White people have a responsibility to dismantle. The workshop will take participants beyond the headlines to impart an antiracist world view that will infuse every aspect of participants' lives, when hearts are open to it. In this group setting you will: Examine the role of White people in dismantling racism, in becoming antiracist, and in building an equitable society. Explore the impact of White privilege and how being unaware of that advantage helps perpetuate racism. Write about your own racial awareness journey. Enhance your understanding and capacity for action through discussion of short readings, videos, and other materials. Share everyday racism-related situations where you may not have effectively responded and, using role plays, work out effective ways to challenge racism. Develop a specific plan for challenging racism in the workplace, an organization, or in the community, while being encouraged to find other people in your life who can provide support and serve as an accountability partner in implementing your plan.

Please note: Attendance at all sessions and completion of all assignments are required. Each participant will receive a phone call from one of the facilitators prior to the start of this program to review the commitment and class requirements.

Please note that live-streaming links are available for both of these talks after vou register.

In his journal entry of February 28, 1638, John Winthrop noted that "Mr Peirce, in the Salem ship, the Desire" had arrived from the West Indies with "some cotton, and tobacco, and negroes, etc. from thence, and salt from Tertugos." This passage from 1638 is widely considered to be the first recorded instance of enslaved Africans in Boston, signalling the start of New England slavery.

But New England slavery began, not with the importation of Africans, but two years earlier with the enslavement of Native people in the Pequot War - a fact we need to remember as we honor Indigenous People's Day.

Hundreds of Pequot men, women and children were captured, enslaved, and either kept in New England or sent to the Caribbean to work and die on English plantations. In 1636, John Winthrop ordered 17 war Pequot captives to be transported to the Caribbean by the same ship Desire on its outward journey.

New England, with its relatively small numbers of enslaved people, was not alone. Up to 5 million Indigenous people across the Americas were enslaved. Learn more at Stolen

Rosa Parks Beyond, Beyond The Bus

Meet Author H.H. Leonards as she speaks about her book, "Rosa Parks Beyond The Bus: Life, Lessons, and Leadership." The book is a collection of inspiring and instructive memories compiled from the decade that Rosa Parks was a guest in Mrs. Leonard's Washington, DC home. During those years, Mrs. Leonards was able to get to know the heart, mind, and spirit of the woman who refused to give up her seat on a Montgomery, Alabama city bus on December 1, 1955. Ms. Leonards will sign books at the event.

Books can be purchased at the BHTNH gift shop or via the registration form.

This event is presented in partnership with Temple Israel in Portsmouth.

Space is limited. Registration is required.

Register here.

Kerri Greenidge, author of "The Grimkes: The Legacy of Slavery in An American Family," will present the annual William Lloyd Garrison Lecture on Saturday, Dec. 9, at 7 p.m. at Old South Presbyterian Church.

Greenidge, a professor at Tufts University, will speak on "Go Forth and Enlighten Your Brethren! Black New England, William Lloyd Garrison, and the Legacy of Radical Abolition" in this, the fourth annual lecture sponsored by the Friends of William Lloyd Garrison. The annual lecture marks the birthday of the abolitionist and newspaper editor who was born in Newburyport. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Newburyport's Annual

William Lloyd Garrison Lecture

Newburyport celebrates William Lloyd Garrison's legacy on his birthday. Every year, we invite a well known author, historian, or public speaker to talk about Garrison's life, and how it is still relevant today.

The talk focuses on the legacy of slavery, its continuing impact on the United States, and current issues around diversity, inclusiveness, and LGBTQ acceptance.
